Other forums
Posted by Will Steele - 13 Jan 2010 - 13:26

Robert, do you have any suggestions for links where I might be able to ask basic questions to help learn about simple items assumed for working with WinDbg? I know many of my questions are really outside the scope of what I need to learn about here.

==========

Re:Other forums
Posted by Robert Kuster - 17 Jan 2010 - 18:32

Hi Will,

From my point of view your questions perfectly fit to the forum; that is what it actually is about. Help people with WinDbg, regardless to what their initial skills might be. Hm, if you nevertheless want other places there are several. You might check Syinternals or CodeProject's debug section; the Forum at Open System Resources (OSR), or the handy blog from Dmitry called Dumpanalysis; then there is Debuginfo and so on. But after all you could also take a day off, read WinDbg. From A to Z!, and play around with CrashMe along the way. In fact WinDbg. From A to Z! answered virtually all of your questions so far. ;)

Hope to see you around, Robert

==========

Re:Other forums
Posted by Tom Adams - 26 Jun 2011 - 21:58

Awesome answer, very nice.

americancritic

==========